HOUSE APPROVES PLAN TO CURB DICTATOR

Senate Will Consider Resolution To-day

PORTS AND CUSTOMS OFFICES ON GULF TO BE SEIZED WITHIN 24 HOURS ASSERTS OFFICIALS

LOOKS AS THOUGH THERE WILL BE A WAR

BULLETIN

Washington, April 20.—At 12:28 A. M. the Senate adjourned without any action on the resolution authorizing President Wilson to employ armed force to bring the Dictator, Huerta, to terms. By agreement, the resolution comes up for consideration at noon Tuesday (today.)

Washington, April 20.—In forty-eight hours, possibly less, the United States Government will have taken possession of the Mexican Customhouses at Tampico and Vera Cruz.

Detailed plans for landing of marines at these two important coast towns were completed at a conference at the White House between President Wilson, Secretaries Bryan, Garrison and Daniels, Maj. Gen. Wood and Rear Admirals Pike and Blue and John Lind.

"No orders to the army and navy will be given tonight," was the announcement made after the conference, action temporarily being deferred until Congress acts on the joint resolution approving the President's purpose of using the armed forces of the United States to enforce its demands against Gen. Huerta growing out of the arrest at Tampico of American bluejackets.

The resolution passed the House tonight by a vote of 387 to 37 after a spirited debate. For several hours it was considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, with prospect of an all-night session of the Senate, or a recess until early tomorrow.

Asks Aid of Congress

In asking aid of Congress President Wilson said in part:

"This Government can, I earnestly hope, in no circumstances be forced into war with the people of Mexico. Mexico is torn by civil strife. If we are to accept the tests of its own Constitution, it has no government. Gen. Huerta has set his power up in the City of Mexico, such as it is, without right and by methods for which there can be no justification.

"Only part of the country is under his control. If armed conflict should unhappily come as a result of his attitude of personal resentment toward this government, we should be fighting only Gen. Huerta and those who adhere to him and give him their support, and our object would be only to restore to the people of the distracted republic the opportunity to set up again their own laws and their own government.

No Desire for Territory

"But I earnestly hope that war is not now the question. I believe that I speak for the American people when I say that we do not desire to control in any degree the affairs of our sister republic. Our feeling for the people of Mexico is one of deep and genuine friendship, and everything that we have so far done or refrained from doing has proceeded from our desire to help them, not to hinder or embarrass them. We would not wish even to exercise the good offices of friendship without their welcome and consent."

The people of Mexico are entitled to settle their own domestic affairs in their own way, and we sincerely respect their right. The present situation need have none of the grave complications of interference if we deal with it promptly firmly and wisely.

"No doubt I could do what is necessary in the circumstances to enforce respect for our Government without recourse to the Congress, and yet not exceed my constitutional powers as President; but I do not wish to act on a matter of so grave consequence, except in close conference and co-operation with both the Senate and House. I, therefore, come to ask your approval that I should use the armed forces of the United States in such ways and to such an extent as may be necessary to obtain from Gen. Huerta and his advocates the fullest recognition of the rights and dignity of the United States, even against the distressing conditions now unhappily obtaining in Mexico.

"There can be no thought of aggression or of selfish aggrandizement. We seek to maintain the dignity and authority of the United States only because we wish always to keep our great influence unimpaired for the uses of liberty, both in the United States and wherever else it may be employed for the benefit of mankind."

destroyed by American Foul Brood, and does not commonly draw out in long threads. The cells containing diseased grubs are rarely capped. The odor from dead brood is commonly not very noticeable. Both drone and queen grubs are attacked.

Treatment For Disease.

Experience shows that foul brood may be suppressed, at least for a time, by the simple practice of removing the bees to a clean hive in the frames of which are narrow strips of foundation. If all the brood is not out of the cells at the time, it can be brushed before the new hive later, or can be kept in a colony reserved for the purpose until it emerges.

The infected combs should be destroyed (rendered) by heat, if necessary by burning, and the hive should be thoroughly drenched, after scraping away all propolis and comb, insides and out, with a two per cent solution of formalin. Any honey present should be boiled thoroughly, or destroyed. The frames may well be burned. All tools used should be carefully disinfected with formalin before using them on other hives. Those engaged in inspecting colonies can not be too careful about these matters when going from one colony to another.

Queens May Be Medium.

There is some difference of opinion among those who study bee diseases as to the possibility of conveying foul brood by means of bought queens. Many practical beekeepers and queen rearers claim that these diseases are never so conveyed. People who have bought queens sometimes claim that they have introduced the disease in this way. The fact appears to be that they are not commonly conveyed by means of queens, and the postoffice regulations bearing upon the matter imply that if the candy used in the cages in which the queens are shipped is boiled, queens do not convey foul brood even when taken from infected colonies.

The subject must be regarded as "open for discussion," however.

"Pickle brood," and some other obscure diseases are not at present well enough understood to warrant any very positive statements concerning them.

Note.—A State Beekeepers' Association, organized at the University, January 9, 1914, has for one of its objects the control of the spread of foul brood in Kentucky. Those interested in this and other matters relating to beekeeping should join. Section VI of the Constitution adopted reads: "Any persons interested in beekeeping may become an active member of the Association by paying the annual dues of fifty cents."

FORAGE POISONING .

In a bulletin on forage poisoning, E. W. Mumma, veterinary department, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, says:

"In the last two months numerous letters have been received from farmers reporting the presence of this disease in a very virulent form, resulting in the loss of large numbers of animals. . . .

"The cause of this disease is closely related to the feed. In the majority of outbreaks observed in the Blue Grass section and along the Ohio River countries, where it has been most prevalent, the cause is attributed to moldy or inferior ensilage. Samples of ensilage have been received at the Experiment Station for detailed study, and Dr. H. Garman reports the presence of molds which are considered the cause of forage poisoning in one of the middle western states. . . .

"The disease has occurred more commonly in horses and mules where ensilage was the principal feed. Ensilage of a high grade can be fed to horses and mules with both safety and profit, but when tainted or inferior, ensilage should be fed very sparingly to any class of live stock. Cattle, however, are not so subject to its ill effects as are horses and mules. The practice of feeding ensilage to the latter must be carried on with care, and careful inspection of the ensilage must be made at each feeding time in order to discard all inferior portions. It should not be fed early in the morning or late in the evening when it is impossible to detect the spoiled and inferior feed.

"There seems to be but little doubt that this trouble could be wholly eliminated, or partially so, by the correct construction of the silo, as a majority of the outbreaks have occurred where the silo was improperly built. All silos should be covered. The silo expert may not concede that this is essential, but our observations lead us to believe that this is an excellent precaution. Any growth of molds or decomposition in the upper layers of the silage will be carried downward by rain and continue to spoil the ensilage.

"The elimination of the losses, which this year will approximate $25,000.00, lies therefore, in prevention. Some outbreaks have occurred following the feeding of moldy corn or hay, all of which must be discarded and destroyed if the loss is to be entirely prevented. Animals suffering from forage poison do not as a rule respond readily to treatment. This was shown in the outbreak of 1912, when only 34 cattle were saved from the 134 affected; 147 horses out of 612 affected; 16 mules out of 115 affected. On the appearance of the disease a complete change of feed and quarters is quite essential, and each animal should be given a laxative to rid the intestinal canal of its contents and prevent the development of other disease."

DISEASES AND

FOES OF BEES

Birds and insects Prey Upon Colonies, but Can Be Combated

PREVENTION BEST WEAPON

Honey Makers Subject to Devastating Maladies Caused By Germs—Change of Hive and Cleanliness Often Afford Relief—Debated Whether Queens Convey Foul Brood—Beekeepers Form Association.

(H. Garman, Head of Division of Entomology and Botany, Kentucky Experiment Station.)

The best-known enemy of the honey bee is the Bee Moth, an obscure insect that has probably been in this country ever since bees were introduced. It seems to have been a serious pest in the early days when box hives and bee gums were the only means of keeping colonies. Since the movable-frame hive came into use there has been less trouble in keeping colonies free, and as a matter of fact, good colonies of Italians, or Carniolans, when properly cared for, are not troubled by this pest. The common black bee is more subject to injury, but even blacks in movable-frame hives, and kept strong, need not seriously be harmed by the moth.

Combatting the Moth.

The bee moth will make trouble in weak colonies, and any exposed comb, stored in hives, or elsewhere, is pretty sure to invite attack and to be ultimately ruined. Such comb should always be kept in screened quarters so that the adult moths can not get to the comb to lay their eggs. Once in comb the young moth should be cut out and destroyed and the comb fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas or burning sulphur. Bisulphid of carbon, sometimes used to fumigate combs, leaves an odor for a time that may prove objectionable to the bees, if the comb is used at once.

Birds and Bug Foos.

The Bee Martin' or King Bird (Tyrannus tyrannus) is a well known feeder, and recently I have observed the Tyrant Flycatcher (Myiarchus crinitus) waiting near hives and capturing bees as they passed to and fro. These enemies of the beekeeper are very easily disposed of by the occasional use of a shotgun.

The Bee Moth—Different Stages of Development.

a, side view of larva; b, back of larva;
c and d, views of pupa; e, cocoon.

The Green Juno Bugs (Allorhina nitida) on one occasion worried a colony of mine by attempting to pass the guard at the entrance. Their thick crust seemed to protect them against the stings, and after being rolled from the alighting board by a gang of angry bees, they came back and tried again.

Narrowing the entrance and destroying the beetles by hand served after a time to put a stop to the attack. The occasion for their peculiar behavior seemed to be the nearness of the hives to a mass of decaying vegetable matter in which the beetles developed.

A good many enemies besides those mentioned are known, but they are not much feared by good beekeepers. Prevention, keeping colonies strong, in good hives, etc., are sufficient precautions against most of them.

Among the Diseases.

The diseases known as Foul Brood are quite a different matter, and the very mention of foul brood is likely to rouse the nerves of the best of beekeepers. Two different diseases are known by this name, one being designated American Foul Brood, the other, European Foul Brood. Both are germ diseases, carried by rod-shaped bacteria which attack the brood and infect the hives and combs so that they must be treated or destroyed to get rid of the infestation.

The two diseases may be described as follows:

American Foul Brood.

Grubs light brown at first, becoming dark brown at an advanced stage of the disease. A small stick thrust into the body of such a grub, when withdrawn brings with it a string of gluey matter which may reach a length of an inch or more before breaking. The cells in which are diseased grubs are capped, the caps being sunken and broken finally. A decided gluey odor is given off by dead grubs. Drone and queen grubs are less subject to the disease than those of workers.

European Foul Brood.

The grubs are attacked at an earlier stage than in American Foul Brood, and those attacked become restless, and are marked with a yellow spot near the head end. They become entirely yellow later, and then brown, finally black. The substance of the dead bodies is less gluey than in those

About Umbrellas.

Eyeglass wearers have long since complained that people are careless with umbrellas. Many pairs of glasses have been knocked off and broken by persons who selfishly refuse to move an umbrella so as to allow other people to easily pass. A few even persist in dangerously spinning an umbrella along a crowded street, endangering the glasses and sometimes eyes of passing walkers.

New York's Nickname.

Gotham is the name of a village in England whose inhabitants, according to ancient tradition, were noted for their unsophisticatedness and simplicity and hence were called, by way of ridicule, "the wise men of Gotham." English legends and rhymes refer to the wise men of Gotham, and Washington Irving, in Salmagundi, applied it as a nickname to New York because the inhabitants were such wiseacres. The nickname has survived its original significance if it ever had any.

TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, 'Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache.' I said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,' and she did and feels fine now."—Mrs. M. R. Karschack, 1438 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case.

Dayton, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years, and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition."—Mrs. J. W. Sherer, 126 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

How to Enter The Bee Office

Parties wishing to enter this office at this season should be governed by the following rules. Advance to the inner door and give three distinct raps or kick the door down. The devil will attend to the alarm. You will then give him your name, post-office address and the number of years you owe for the paper. He will admit you. You will advance to the center of the room and address the editor with the following countersign: Extend the right hand about two feet from the body, with the thumb and index finger pointing to a ten dollar bill which drops into the extended hand of the editor, at the same time saying, "were you looking for me? The editor will grasp your hand and the bill and pressing it will say, "You bet." After giving the news of your locality you will be permitted to retire with a receipt for an obligation properly discharged and a clear conscience.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative" and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given...

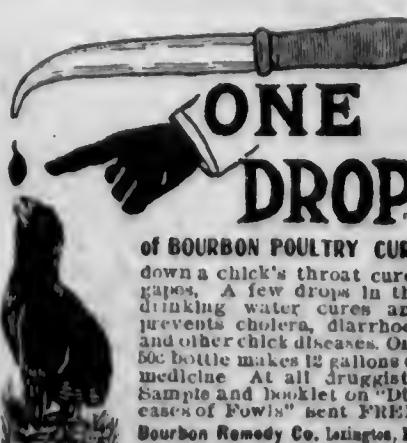

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

MOLLYCODDLE LAXATIVES

They may clear out the intestinal tract, but they're rolling the dammed-up bile. Years ago May Apple Root (called Podophyllin) was a last-resort bile starter. It gripped fearfully, but brought out the bile. Podophyllin with the grip taken out is now to be had under the name

A couple of trappers were climbing up the mountain-side, at the same time keeping their eyes peeled for garter snakes. They were employed by the Holdemup Garter Co. to get garter snakes, out of which garters were manufactured. After they had gathered about 800 of the reptiles they decided to go back. At the foot of the mountain they met the Superintendant of the factory, who said, "If the Mexican forts started to bombard the American ships would the Atlantic Squadron?"

He Wanted His Adversary's Ears

By MARK HATHAWAY

At a table d'hôte in Berlin a party of Americans sat during and chatting with each other in their native language. The party consisted of a father, mother, a daughter nineteen years old and a young man, also an American, whose method of speaking indicated that he was a southerner. Opposite these persons sat a couple of young men in the uniform of the German army. Hearing those opposite them conversing in English, but not being sure that none of them spoke German, they refrained for some time from saying anything that they would not like to have overheard.

But finally the younger of the two remarked to his friend in a low tone that the young lady opposite was very pretty. The other cautioned him to say nothing about the party in their hearing, but without effect. The young man made several remarks that were complimentary with a view to testing the Americans' comprehension of the German language, and when he discovered that they paid no attention to him he gathered confidence and criticised them unmercifully.

It happened that the young man sitting beside the young lady was a student at a German university. His name was Thibadeaux and his home was New Orleans. He was a member of a dueling corps and at the time its champion. He spoke German fluently, and, though he pretended not to understand what the pair were saying, he took in every word. While chatting with his young lady companion the question arose as to the date of the blowing up of the tower of the castle of Heidelberg. Thibadeaux said that he would ask one of the officers opposite. Then he said in German to the younger of the two:

"Herr, I have heard your remarks about our party and especially the young lady on my right. Kindly tell me where a friend of mine will find you after dinner."

The man addressed saw from the young lady—Miss Archard's—action that she was ignorant of what was being said and, though he colored slightly, did not give the matter away. He could only give the address required and his name, which was Von Wrangler.

"What does he say?" asked Miss Archard.

"He says he doesn't know."

After dinner Thibadeaux left the others to smoke, but more especially to find a fellow student named Reinhart.

Reinhart, who acted for Thibadeaux in the affair, said nothing as to his principal being a student in Germany, a member of a corps or a champion with the small sword. A meeting was arranged in a wood near the city, where a number of duels had been fought, for the next morning at 6 o'clock.

Thibadeaux, having smoked his cigar, returned to Miss Archard and spent the rest of the evening with her. But by 10 o'clock she gave a slight yawn, which she hastened to cover with her handkerchief, and her visitor soon bade her good evening without giving the slightest hint that in the morning he would risk his life in her behalf. Indeed, he was not sorry to depart, for he knew Reinhart was waiting for him to give him the final details for the meeting. These having been transmitted and approved, Thibadeaux went to bed. Reinhart was to call for him the next morning at 4.

Long before daylight the second burst into the room and stood over Thibadeaux's bed.

"Is it 4 o'clock?" asked the latter, trying to rouse himself.

"No; it is but 3."

"Then why do you awaken me?"

"To show you that."

He shoved a paper under Thibadeaux's nose and held a lamp, which he had lighted, so that his friend could read it.

"An apology!" exclaimed Thibadeaux. "What does it mean? Surely that young officer would not dare to apologize under a challenge. He will be tabooed by his brother officers."

"Not under the circumstances. It's your fault that the affair has gone amiss. What induced you to give a challenge in the presence of the woman about whom the duel was to have been fought?"

"Miss Archard! She doesn't understand a word of German."

"Perhaps she doesn't. But what these women don't hear with their ears they see with their eyes. The young lady must have known that you were giving a challenge, for at midnight she called upon Von Wrangler in company with an escort. He was in bed, but dressed himself and came down to receive her. She said that she knew he was to fight you, but since the duel was about her he should fight her first. He tried to explain that if he fought a woman he would be disgraced, whereupon she said she would accept an apology. Von Wrangler offered to apologize to her, but fight you. To this she demurred.

"Finally Von Wrangler, fearing the affair, which was to his discredit, would reach the ear of the emperor, consented to write you an apology, with the understanding that the affair was to be kept a secret. Miss Archard gave this pledge for you as well as herself."

"Ugh!" exclaimed Thibadeaux. "I wanted his ears to take back with me to the university."
